Novel adeno-associated virus serotype 1 polynucleotide useful for  ${\sf preparation}$  of medicament for delivery of a transgene to a host.

Claim 7; Page 99-101; 108pp; English.

The patent discloses an adeno-associated virus serotype 1 (AAV-1) DNA which is characterised by two inverted terminal repeats (ITR) and open reading frames for rep and cappid (cap) proteins. The rep reading frame encodes four proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV hence is useful for transforming host cells, and in the preparation of services. of a

The rep reading frame for rep and capsid (cap) proteins. The rep reading frame common proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap CC encodes four proteins, Rep 79, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap CC dalvers, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene CC delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vectore common of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV CC formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV CC medicament for the delivery of transgene to a host. The present sequence is an AAV-1 cap protein VP2 which is useful in the production of recombinant viral vector for gene delivery

The rep reading frame encodes four proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AV cap medicament for the delivery of transgene to a host. The present sequence is an AAV-1 cap protein VP1 which is useful in the production of cap recombinant viral vector for gene delivery
